Link to Government Grant Sites - 2022

Many businesses ask me about grant opportunities for them and so for your convenience, here is a listing of the main Government grant sites. Not every one and not the private sector ones, but something to get you started. Of course, from time to time (especially after a disaster or significant event) additional opportunities can be presented. Remember though, whilst there are literally billions of dollars to be claimed under grants, the vast majority of these funds are earmarked for community, charity and sporting bodies. There is also funding at times for minority groups, such as indigenous peoples. At times too, there is funding for women.

When it comes to grants, here are some tips:

- Carefully and fully read the application, criteria and provided documentation. If you're not eligible or suitable, then thinking "but I'll give it a go" will just be a waste of time. Suitability is very important also and if you're unsure there is a frequently a number you can call to discuss your intended project and ask. Be very aware there are limits on what the funds can be used for; often not for general day to day business costs.
- Answer the questions fully and clearly; it may take some time.
- Have your application read by another and proof checked for spelling and any other issues.
- If the application is for a good amount of money, you might consider a grant writer; a good one knows what they are doing. For small grants below $15K or so, generally they are designed to be done by the business owner.
